Mission Statements:

Mine

As a leader in the field of educational technology it is my responsibility to find the most effective and affordable means in integrating into the classroom. To accomplish this goal I regularly evaluate new technological platforms and determine how they can be adapted to be used to fulfill a need in the classroom.

IALLT's

Established in 1965, IALLT is a professional organization whose members provide leadership in the development, integration, evaluation and management of instructional technology for the teaching and learning of language, literature and culture. Its strong sense of community promotes the sharing of expertise in a variety of educational contexts.

Comparison

My vision and mission statements tend to be inline with those of the organization I chose. We both seemed to be geared towards assisting faculty and other professionals in the classroom as well as in exposing people to the potential uses of language in the classroom. IALLT is geared more specifically towards foreign language instruction and I'm more focused of a general use in all classrooms. IALLT's mission statement though emphasizes what appears to be the creation of curriculum as well as using technology for literature and cultural education. They also try to promote a sense of community where others can exchange ideas. This is more difficult to pull off as an individual unless we were to solely organize conferences. It's good to see that there are other organizations out there that seem to have similar goals in mind to those of my own.
